Inspirational week

Abeer Al Matoonq

An ambitious business and HR consultant as well as a bright life coach, did not take age as an excuse to stop her from becoming the best version of herself, to get her first job when she was a high school student.

After 17 years of being in the business, Abeer was able to launch her very own company which focuses on self-development and enhancing skill sets, she became the first Bahrain to be accredited by Leeds University's leadership program and the Innermetrix certification program, in addition to writing and publishing a book.

Wishing Abeer the best of luck in her endeavours!

Haya Al Thawadi

You might have seen her unique pins and souvenir gifts before, but have you met the person behind this idea?

Introducing Haya AlThawadi, entrepreneur and founder of @qaalaam!

Qaalaam, or pen in Arabic, was Haya's vision which she turned into a reality after three years of working in the Ministry of Education, her distinguished and fun designs reflect our heritage and traditions, as well as her obsession with collecting pens from all over the world and stationery items since a young age, after just one week, Haya was able to grow a followers base of 3000 people, to become today one of the leading female entrepreneurs in the Kingdom.

Sameera Bucheeri

Sameera Bucheeri missed out on her university education to become a housewife, but that did not stop her from striving to make a positive impact on society through voluntary work, and establishing her own charity society, and launching the Kingdom's biggest Ramadan charity basket. Sameera is also a member of the Bahrain Voluntary Work Society, and the Bahrain Red Crescent Society.

Sameera is a fine example of Bahrainis who are passionate about the gift of giving.
